The Delphi Opera House announced plans to resume presenting live events beginning in September of 2021. During the pandemic the facility has been following the Governor's guidelines that have limited audience size. Meetings and small weddings have been taking place over the past year with those guests who were willing to abide by the guidelines, including wearing of masks, social distancing and limits to the number of participants. Limits on audience size and social distancing requirements led to a "hold" on performances presented by the Opera House.

A tentative fall 2021 schedule has been released, which will include performances by Ben Benford, Scott Greeson & the Trouble With Monday, HHR, and Joe Peters and friends with Michael Kelsey. It is hoped that Red Brick Theatre will also offer a play in November. Tickets will go on sale this summer, when it is presumed the Governor's guidelines will allow a full house to be accommodated.

The Delphi Opera House is available for room rentals for meetings and events, and is now accepting bookings for weddings and wedding receptions.

For more information, please inquire via email: info@delphioperahouse.org, or visit the Delphi Opera House's website, www.delphioperahouse.org, or its Facebook page. Those holding memberships will receive first notice of ticket sales, and all past patrons who have provided an email address will receive email notification of events and ticket sales. Membership information can be found on the website.
